MARSHFIELD.

Reception in Honor of Mr. and Mrs. Wilber Goodrich.
Miss Myra Duke, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Forest Duke of this place, was married December 18 to Darrell Howard of East St. Johnsbury, at the home of the officiating clergyman, Rev. Ward. Mrs. Howard has the best wishes of her many friends here for a happy and prosperous future.
Mrs. Darrell Howard and Miss Ruth Duke of St. Johnsbury were the guests of their mother, Mrs. Susan Duke, through the Christmas holidays. Mr. Howard was with them over Sunday, returning to their home the first of the week. Miss Ruth returned to her work at St. Johnsbury academy last Monday.
About ninety people met in the grange hall Friday evening in a farewell reception to Mr. and Mrs. Wilber Goodrich of Laurier, Manitoba, Can. Their many friends, while bidding them good-bye, felt a sadness in having Mrs. Goodrich go so far from her native town and family. At 8 o'clock the wedding party marched to the hall and were greeted by those present, being aided in receiving by a brother of the bride, Frank E. Brown, and wife, and her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank H. Brown, after which a short program of music and reading was given. Reading, Miss Ethel Bonzon; song, Mrs. J. Berton Pike; reading, Miss Hazel Billings; song, Herbert Emery; an original poem was read by Mrs. George Davis.
Our Mary.
One day, a few short years ago,
A dark-eyed baby came
To gladden the heart and brighten the home
That gave it birth and name.
The baby grew, as all babies do,
Till she became a maiden fair;
The object of a father's pride and joy,
And a mother's tender care.
At school she won the love and respect
Of teacher and schoolmates as well;
For at study or play she did her best
As all who knew her will tell.
The years sped by till the maiden fair,
Has now to womanhood grown;
And, by dainty creations of silk and lace,
Her taste and skill are shown.
Soon her fame spreads far and wide
To many a neighboring town;
And she who was once a maiden shy
Becomes a milliner of renown.
At length, as her wonderful skill is known,
Her services are in demand,
And she finds employment in a larger field,
For her ever-willing hand.
And it is only now and then,
As vacation time draws near,
That we see her pleasant smile
And hear her words of cheer.
But, ere long we learn, a lover
Has sought her heart and hand,
To take her for his bride
To a far and distant land.
But let there be in minor in the carol,
No shadow in the light,
For 'tis to wish them godspeed, and not good-bye,
That we're gathered here to-night.
And though we cannot see her often
As in the days of yore,
Let us think she loves us none the less
But loves another more.
And though this pair may be happy be,
And live for ever after alone,
They'll never forget their friends in Vermont,
The land of their childhood home.
Their life will be full of sorrow and joy,
As life is wont to be;
But may the sorrows be far outweighed
By the joys,
As they sail life's silvery sea.
And may the days more golden grow,
Till fifty years have sped away,
Then may each day a diamond be,
To deck their heads of gray.
And now, as they start on their journey of life,
With a future so happy and bright,
May they take this parting blessing
We bestow on them to-night.
